

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

finally grown so great that it is now practically irresistible. The governments are no longer able to refuse its behests. It will have its way everywhere before long. War is doomed.

It is a great time in which to live and work. Let us thank God and take courage.

A Permanent Headquarters for the American Peace Society.

We call the attention of all the members and friends of the American Peace Society to the Appeal, published on another page, for funds with which to procure a building to serve as a permanent headquarters of the Society. The reasons are there given why the Society should have such a building and what service an adequate headquarters would render in the enlargement and strengthening of its work.

The sum asked for may seem to many a large one. But in a great city like Boston where land is enormously expensive one hundred thousand dollars will buy only a very modest estate. Furthermore, the money will not be sunk in brick and mortar and become unproductive. It is estimated that the rentals from the rooms not needed for offices will amount to four per cent. net on the investment, and thus the building when secured will become a permanent endowment yielding a steady annual income. With the increased funds thus provided the work now done by the Society can be not only doubled but quadrupled. Even thus the growing demands made upon it by the extraordinary increase of public interest in the cause of international arbitration and peace cannot be half met. Double the sum asked for could be immediately put to the most profitable use.

Our friends understand all this without any argument. We appeal to them, one and all, to make as large subscriptions as possible to the purchase fund. It is an extraordinary opportunity, and ought to be met with extraordinary energy. No money need be paid until the entire hundred thousand dollars is pledged, as will be seen by reading the terms of the subscription. Two years' time is given in which to make payment, and that will make it easy for any one desiring to help to do so.

If all the members, the actual paying members of the Society only, would contribute an average of one hundred dollars each, seventy thousand dollars would be pledged. Some of course can do little or nothing. Others can give only five or ten dollars. But a large number can easily spare a hundred dollars. Some can spare a thousand dollars, and a few five thousand dollars or more. Two members of the Board of Directors have already pledged five thousand dollars each and one a thousand, and other smaller sums are already being subscribed.

Beyond the actual membership of the Society there are thousands of men and women, deeply interested in the movement for the permanent establishment of peace among the nations, who will be glad of this opportunity to do something generous and effective for the movement which they have so much at heart and often wish they could aid. The amount asked for, for this headquarters, is but a mere bagatelle compared with the incredible sums yearly put into national armaments, even in our own country. It is only one-eightieth as much as it now costs to build a single first-class battleship, and several times less than the cost of maintaining the vessel for a single year.

The whole amount asked ought to be raised in a very short time. We confidently appeal to our friends everywhere to send in their pledges promptly, that the Society may be placed in a position to meet in an adequate way the enlarged responsibilities which the immense progress of the movement has laid upon it. The time has come for the friends of peace to do great thing if they expect speedily to overthrow the great evil whose existence they bemoan.

In sending pledges copy and sign the form of subscription given at the end of the appeal. If cash contributions are sent, make checks or money orders payable to the American Peace Society.

Brevities.

. . . At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Peace Society held on May 23, Edwin D. Mead, Lucia Ames Mead, Miss Anna B. Eckstein, Joshua L. Baily, Mrs. Mary Taber Tatum, Mrs. Annie S. Churchill, Miss Natalie Kirsch, Benjamin F. Trueblood and Miss Florence E. Trueblood were chosen delegates to the Peace Congress at Lucerne, which opens on the 19th of September. Since that time Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ginn, who have decided to go abroad for the summer, have also been appointed delegates. The President and Secretary were authorized to select other delegates and will be glad to learn of any other members of the Society who expect to be in Europe at the time of the Congress.

. . . No greater speech has recently been delivered in any national parliament than that of Mr. d'Estournelles de Constant in the French Senate on April 11 on the question of reduction of armaments. We have translated and given our readers the first half of the speech in this issue and shall publish the remainder next month.

. . . At both the schools for colored people in Alabama, Tuskegee and Snow Hill, prizes were offered this year for the best paper on peace. The prize at Tuskegee was won by Walter Benjamin Scott of Kingston, Jamaica, the subject being "Charles Sumner, an Advocate of Peace." At Snow Hill the prize was awarded at commencement to Lettie P. Rivers of Snow Hill, Ala. Dr. Washington writes from Tuskegee that the prize stimulated a great deal of extra effort on the part of the students. At Snow Hill there were four speakers, all of whom declared that war ought to be abolished. These prizes, we believe, are offered by Miss Ellen Collins, of New York, and are to be continued hereafter.